EY Trajectory Program

Are you a sophomore in the School of Management or Watson Engineering School?

Would you like to learn more about information technology and consulting careers?

Would you like exposure to consulting professionals from a “Big Four” public accounting firm?

EY will provide selected students from Binghamton University guidance and direction through a four credit course during the Spring 2016 Semester for those students interested in pursuing careers in technology consulting.
EY Trajectory Program
Binghamton University

Spring 2016

Overview

- EY consulting professionals to provide students with a sample technology consulting case study and guide the students through research and strategy development
- Regular sessions with EY consulting professionals to gain insight and exposure to the challenges faced by global institutions
- Periodic meetings with a simulated “client team” comprised of EY leadership to replicate client service interactions and responsibilities
- A unique mentorship opportunity for students to build and enhance leadership, consulting, project management, and teamwork skills

Program details

- Weekly conference calls (tentatively Fridays from 12:00 PM to 1:00 PM) with EY consulting professionals for teams to present case study deliverables and discuss related current events
- Multi-phased program that includes presentations at the completion of each phase to the “client team” comprised of EY leadership as well as Binghamton faculty

Target audience

- SOM and Watson School undergraduate sophomores expected to declare majors of Management Information Systems (MIS), Computer Science, or Industrial and Systems Engineering

Potential case study topics

- Business continuity
- Cloud computing
- Disaster recovery
- Mobile security
- Social media
- Technology risk assessments

Key dates

- EY to conduct information sessions at Binghamton between the weeks of September 14 and October 12
- Submit your resume to Daniel Cain (Watson School, dcain@binghamton.edu) or Carolyn Schapiro (School of Management, schapiro@binghamton.edu) Friday, October 23
- EY to communicate student selections Friday, November 13